

Hon. John Appleton, secretary of the American legation in London, in a recent letter to the Portland (Me.) Argus, of which he is the accomplished editor, speaks of the French Emperor and Empress as follows:

The diplomatic corps was presented to the Emperor and Empress at the French embassy yesterday, about 5 P.M. The American legation had an excellent opportunity to see the distinguished sovereigns. The Emperor received Mr. Buchanan with marked cordiality. He alluded to his visit to New York, and expressed his earnest hope that America and France might remain always at peace. This hope, of course, the American Minister reciprocated.

The Emperor is certainly a very attractive person. She has perfect self-possession, pleasing manners, and a graceful person. They both speak English, and speak much better English than the Emperor."

BLONDRISM.—A New York letter writer says:

About every fourth individual you meet to-day in the devout parts of the city wears a white cravat or a buff pectoral—the latter in many cases only reaching a small bit below the knee, and then the pants going the rest of the way. But this anniversary week, and that explains all. "I'm only once in a twelve-month such sights are to be seen, even in Gotham, however much we may boast of our big "elephant." The first blonder of the season made his appearance in the Park about ten o'clock on Saturday; and how the little urchins did run to see what an excellent fit was her breeches! But the novelty has since worn away, for blonders wear as numerous on Broadway last evening as lamp posts. And it is thought not more than half the "strong minded" have arrived yet. Lucy Stone is come to-morrow, and is to be accompanied by Mr. Stone, her spouse—whom Henry B. Blackwood.
